

Divided We Fail Key Findings in Colorado

Health care costs are skyrocketing and retirement savings are inadequate. The American people have said that these issues are top domestic priorities, and they want answers and action from our elected officials now.<sup>1</sup>

AMERICANS NEED AFFORDABLE, QUALITY HEALTH CARE

Too many people in Colorado are uninsured.

- In 2005, 17 percent of people in Colorado did not have health insurance.
  - 21 percent of those ages 19-64 were uninsured.
  - 14 percent of children were uninsured.
  - 38 percent of Hispanics under age 65 were uninsured compared to 13 percent of Whites.<sup>2</sup>

Health care costs too much.

- Between 1991 and 2004, personal health care expenditures in Colorado grew an average of 7.7 percent per year.<sup>3</sup>
- The average total single premium rose from $2,448 in 1998 to $3,645 in 2003 for employees enrolled at private firms in Colorado that offered health coverage. This was an increase of 49 percent in inflation-adjusted dollars.<sup>4</sup>
- The average employee contribution for health insurance in Colorado rose from $406 per year in 1998 to $580 per year in 2003.<sup>5</sup>
- Over the last seven years, the average manufacturers' price of 153 common drugs increased almost 54 percent, more than 2½ times the rate of inflation.<sup>6</sup>

People in Colorado are concerned about health care costs.

- In 2006, 91 percent of Colorado AARP members considered guaranteeing affordable health care coverage for all as an important issue in their decision about which candidate for U.S. House or Senate to vote for in upcoming elections.<sup>7</sup>
- In 2006, 94 percent of Colorado AARP members considered the affordability of prescription drugs as an important issue in their decision about which candidate for U.S. House or Senate to vote for in upcoming elections.<sup>8</sup>
- In 2005, 71 percent of Colorado AARP members said it was important for the State of Colorado to make prescription drug costs more affordable.<sup>9</sup>

Americans overall are concerned about health care costs.

- In 2006, 80 percent of Americans were dissatisfied with the total cost of health care in this country, including 58 percent who were very dissatisfied.<sup>10</sup>
- 39 percent of adults consider health care costs the most important health problem for the government to address.<sup>11</sup>
- In 2006, 68 percent of Americans believed that providing health care for all Americans was more important than holding down taxes.<sup>12</sup>

AMERICANS NEED LIFETIME FINANCIAL SECURITY

Social Security is vital to the well-being of people in Colorado.

- In 2003, one out of eight Colorado residents (12%) received Social Security.
  - Roughly two out of three (64%) beneficiaries were retirees.
  - More than one out of three (36%) beneficiaries were widows or widowers, workers with disabilities, wives or husbands of workers, or children.<sup>13</sup>
- In 2000, Social Security constituted at least 50% of the total income of just under one-half of Colorado residents age 65+ (45%).<sup>14</sup>
- In 2000, one out of five people (20%) in Colorado age 65 or older relied on Social Security as their only source of income.<sup>15</sup>
- On average, more than two out of five (43%) Colorado residents age 65 or older would have lived below the poverty line in 2000 through 2002 if they had not received Social Security.<sup>16</sup>

People in Colorado are concerned about having a secure retirement.

- In 2002, 70 percent of Colorado AARP members were extremely concerned about having safe and secure pension benefits/savings.<sup>17</sup>
- One half (49%) of Colorado AARP members were extremely concerned about having Social Security as a base for retirement income in 2002.<sup>18</sup>

Americans overall are concerned about having a secure retirement.

- 68 percent of American workers say they are not too or not at all confident that Social Security will continue to provide benefits of at least equal value to the benefits retirees receive today.<sup>19</sup>
- 48 percent of Americans say they are not too or not at all confident that they will have enough money to live comfortably throughout their retirement years.<sup>20</sup>
- 78 percent of Americans say they strongly or somewhat favor automatic enrollment in 401(k)s and having employers set up employee contributions through payroll deduction unless the employee chooses not to participate.<sup>21</sup>
- 79 percent of Americans agree that employers who do not offer some type of retirement plan should be required to offer workers the option of regularly saving a part of their paycheck in a personal individual retirement account or IRA, even if the employer does not contribute to that account.<sup>22</sup>

Americans have not saved enough to retire.

- Only 25 percent of American workers are very confident of achieving a comfortable lifestyle in retirement.<sup>23</sup>
- Only one out of four (25%) baby boomers say they are very prepared for retirement.<sup>24</sup>
- Just 43 percent of workers have actually tried to figure out how much money they will need to save in order to live comfortably in retirement.<sup>25</sup>
