

Divided We Fail Key Findings in Florida

Health care costs are skyrocketing and retirement savings are inadequate. The American people have said that these issues are top domestic priorities and they want answers and action from our elected officials now.¹

AMERICANS NEED AFFORDABLE, QUALITY HEALTH CARE

Too many Floridians are uninsured.

- In 2005, 21 percent of people in Florida did not have health insurance.
 - 27 percent of people 19 to 64 years of age were uninsured.
 - 19 percent of children (under 19 years) were uninsured.
 - 39 percent of Hispanics and 28 percent of Blacks were uninsured.²

Health care costs too much.

- Between 1991 and 2004, personal health care expenditures in Florida grew an average of 7.1 percent per year.³
- The average total single premium rose from $2,344 in 1998 to $3,592 in 2003 for employees enrolled at private firms in Florida that offered health coverage. This was an increase of 53 percent in inflation-adjusted dollars.⁴
- The average employee contribution for health insurance in Florida rose from $516 per year in 1998 to $751 per year in 2003.⁵
- Over the last seven years, the average national manufacturers' price of 153 common drugs increased almost 54 percent, more than 2½ times the rate of inflation.⁶

Floridians are concerned about the health care system.

- In 2006, 55 percent of Floridians say that changes in the health care system during the last few years have been mostly or very bad.⁷
- In 2006, 44 percent of Floridians say that government has responsibility for making sure that people have health care coverage; 20 percent say that employers have the responsibility; 8 percent say that individuals have the responsibility; and 28 percent say the responsibility lies with a combination of government, employers, and individuals.⁸

Americans overall are concerned about health care costs.

- In 2006, 80 percent of adults were dissatisfied with the total cost of health care in this country, including 58 percent who were very dissatisfied.⁹
- In 2005, 39 percent of adults consider health care costs the most important health problem for the government to address.¹⁰
- In 2006, 68 percent of adults believed that providing health care for all Americans was more important than holding down taxes.¹¹
- In 2005, 28 percent of adults reported a time in the prior year when they did not have enough money to pay for medical or health care.¹²

AMERICANS NEED LIFETIME FINANCIAL SECURITY

Social Security is vital to the well-being of people in Florida.

- In 2003, one in five Florida residents (20%) received Social Security.
 - About two in three (68%) beneficiaries were retirees.
 - About one in three (32%) beneficiaries were widows or widowers, workers with disabilities, wives or husbands of workers, or children.¹³
- In 2000, Social Security constituted at least 50% of the total income of one-half of Florida residents age 65+ (49%) and was the only source of income for one in four (23%) Florida residents age 65+.¹⁴
- On average, one-half (50%) of Florida residents age 65+ would have lived below the poverty line in 2000, 2001, and 2002 if they had not received Social Security.¹⁵

AARP members in Florida are concerned about having a secure retirement.

- In 2006, 59 percent of AARP members in Florida were extremely or very concerned about the safety of their pension benefits and retirement savings.¹⁶
- In 2006, the need to save for retirement, an immediate need for money, and the need to maintain health insurance coverage were the top reasons non-retired Florida AARP members were continuing to work in 2006.¹⁷

Americans overall are concerned about having a secure retirement.

- In 2007, 68 percent of American workers say they are not too or not at all confident that Social Security will continue to provide benefits of at least equal value to the benefits retirees receive today.¹⁸
- In 2007, 48 percent of Americans say they are not too or not at all confident that they will have enough money to live comfortably throughout their retirement years.¹⁹
- In 2007, 78 percent of Americans say they strongly or somewhat favor automatic enrollment in 401(k)s and having employers set up employee contributions through payroll deduction unless the employee chooses not to participate.²⁰
- In 2007, 79 percent of Americans agree that employers who do not offer some type of retirement plan should be required to offer workers the option to regularly save a part of their paycheck in a personal individual retirement account or IRA, even if the employer does not contribute to that account.²¹

Americans have not saved enough to retire.

- In 2006, only 25 percent of American workers are very confident of achieving a comfortable lifestyle in retirement.²²
- In 2006, only one in four baby boomers (25%) say they are very prepared for retirement.²³
- In 2007, just 43 percent of American workers have actually tried to figure out how much money they will need to save in order to live comfortably in retirement.²⁴
