

A decorative graphic is present on the page. It features a solid green rectangle in the top-left corner. A thin yellow line forms a large, partial arc that starts from the right side of the green rectangle, curves downwards and to the right, and then curves back to the left, ending near the bottom center of the page. A thin grey horizontal line and a thin grey vertical line intersect at the end of this arc. A small yellow square is located at the intersection point of the horizontal and vertical lines.

AARP recently commissioned a statewide survey in Wisconsin to understand public opinion on consumer financial protection issues. The survey was conducted by Woelfel Research, Inc. from April 2-8, 2010 among a representative sample of 500 Wisconsin residents at least 50 years old. The margin of error is +/- 4.4% at the 95% confidence level. The public in Wisconsin shows nearly unanimous support for numerous consumer financial protections.

The following are key findings from the Wisconsin survey of adults aged 50+:

- 97% favor requiring banks to explain in plain language the terms, conditions and fees associated with mortgages and credit card debt. Ninety-one percent “strongly” favor this. There is strong support for this requirement across all political parties with over 9 in 10 Republicans (99%), Democrats (98%), and Independents (97%) favoring it.
- 94% favor requiring financial advisors to tell you upfront about fees or commissions they earn and any conflicts of interest that potentially could bias their advice because financial advisors should put your interest ahead of theirs when making recommendations. Eighty percent “strongly” favor this. There is strong support for this requirement across all political parties with over 9 in 10 Republicans (95%), Democrats (94%), and Independents (94%) favoring it.
- 91% favor protecting people from predatory lending practices, such as excessive fees and penalties, on products ranging from mortgages to credit cards to automobiles. Seventy-four percent “strongly” favor this. There is strong support for this requirement across all political parties with over 8 in 10 Republicans (89%), Democrats (94%), and Independents (88%) favoring it.
- 89% favor requiring investment companies to disclose the costs, risks, and benefits of all the financial products they market and sell using plain language and a user-friendly format. Sixty-nine percent “strongly” favor this. There is strong support for this requirement across all political parties with over 8 in 10 Republicans (83%), Democrats (92%), and Independents (93%) favoring it.
- 87% favor banks only selling consumers mortgages, loans and other products that meet the customers’ needs and stay within the person’s budget. Sixty-eight percent “strongly” favor this. There is strong support for this requirement across all political parties with over 8 in 10 Republicans (81%), Democrats (92%), and Independents (87%) favoring it.
- 81% favor the federal government not being allowed to take away a states’ right to enforce stricter consumer protection laws. Fifty-nine percent “strongly” favor this. There is majority support for this requirement across all political parties with over 7 in 10 Republicans (88%), Democrats (75%) and Independents (80%) favoring it.

The survey suggests a public appetite for consumer financial protections in Wisconsin. Given that support is strong across all political parties, consumer financial protections hold the potential to unify the state in these politically divisive times.
