Key Findings

AARP's first ever election day poll of voters and likely voters age 45+ in Florida Congressional District 22 found that protecting Social Security, making corporations act responsibly, and the economy are dominant issues in determining which candidate to support, with over three-quarters saying they are very important. Other domestic issues, including adding prescription drug coverage to Medicare, taxes, and homeland security are very important to more the six in ten voters and likely voters in deciding which candidate to support.

- Over eight in ten (82%) say protecting Social Security was very important to their voting decisions.
- Nearly eight in ten (79%) say making sure that corporations act responsibly was very important to their voting decisions.
- The economy is cited as very important by more than three-quarters (77%) of voters and likely voters.
- Just over seven in ten (71%) report that homeland security was a very important domestic issue in their vote today.
- Adding prescription drug coverage to Medicare (62%) and taxes (63%) were essentially tied in their relative importance to voting decisions.

Florida Congressional District 22 voters and likely voters age 45+ consider passing laws protecting Social Security and adding prescription drug coverage to Medicare to be top or high priorities for the next Congress.

- When Congress returns to Washington in January 2003, over eight in ten consider passing legislation to protect Social Security to be a top (59%) or high (24%) priority for the next Congress.
- Similarly, nearly three in four consider passing a law to add prescription drug coverage to Medicare to be a top (46%) or high (28%) priority.

Methodology

AARP commissioned ICR, a national survey research firm, to conduct a random digit dial (RDD) telephone survey of voters and likely voters age 45 or older in Florida Congressional District 22. Respondents were screened for age and for their likelihood of voting. A total of 402 interviews were completed from November 2 through noon, November 5, 2002. The survey has a sampling error of plus or minus five percentage points for overall results. This means that in 95 out of 100 samples of this size, the results obtained in the sample would fall in a range of five percentage points of what would have been obtained if every voter and likely voter in Florida Congressional District 22 age 45 or older had been surveyed. Responses to all survey questions are in the attached annotated questionnaire.
