Introduction and Methodology

AARP commissioned American Viewpoint, Inc. to conduct a series of election surveys in consultation with Hart Research Associates, Inc. Blinded telephone interviewing was conducted with AARP members who are likely voters in the 2010 federal elections. Respondents were selected from random samples of the membership provided by AARP and then screened for likelihood of voting and to confirm AARP membership. Eight surveys were conducted between September 9 and 21 including a national survey with an Hispanic oversample and seven statewide surveys as follows:

Survey Population	Field Dates
U.S. National, n=1,000 with an oversample of n=250 Hispanic voters	9/9-13/2010
Ohio Statewide, n=500	9/12-13/2010
Pennsylvania Statewide, n=500	9/12-14/2010
Nevada Statewide, n=500	9/13-15/2010
New Hampshire Statewide, n=500	9/14-15/2010
Colorado Statewide, n=500	9/14-15/2010
Florida Statewide, n=500	9/19-20/2010
Missouri Statewide, n=500	9/20-21/2010

Data were weighted to sex and age within region, and race. Weights were based on population characteristics. All surveys are subject to errors caused by interviewing a sample of persons rather than the entire population. At 95 percent confidence, the margin of error for a simple random sample of n=1,000 is  $\pm 3.1$  percentage points; for n=500,  $\pm 4.4$ ; and for n=250,  $\pm 6.2$ . Some scores may not add to 100% due to rounding.

Executive Summary

- The New Hampshire AARP members interviewed are highly likely to vote. In all, 91% say they are definitely planning to vote and another 9% are likely to vote.
- Like many Americans, most New Hampshire AARP members say that things in the country have gotten off on the wrong track, are dissatisfied with current economic conditions and are concerned about the deficit. In all, 60% say the country is on the wrong track, 82% are dissatisfied with the current state of the economy, and 91% are concerned about the deficit. Fewer than four in ten (38%) think the national economy will get better over the course of the next year while 19% think it will get worse and 37% think it will stay about the same.
- As a result, they are concerned about the future. In addition to near-term misgivings about the economy, there is a widespread belief that conditions for their children's generation will be more difficult than they have experienced. Indeed, just one in four (23%) is confident that life for their children's generation will be better than it has been for them while 66% say they are not confident.
- At the same time, most are at least somewhat satisfied with their own economic situation. In fact, 64% are satisfied overall (17% very satisfied) while 35% of all members are dissatisfied with their own economic situation. In addition, they are reasonably optimistic about their economic outlook in the near-term. Most (65%) indicate that their personal financial situation will remain about the same in the next year while 16% think it will get better and 14% worse.
- Part of this optimism may stem from their confidence in Social Security. More than seven in ten (74%) New Hampshire members are confident that they will receive full Social Security benefits throughout their retirement while 24% are not confident. The inherent value of Social Security is underscored by the fact virtually all respondents (97%) – regardless of political affiliation, ideology, or demographic characteristics – say that it is important to them that Social Security is there for future generations.
- To that end, 94% of the AARP members interviewed in New Hampshire say it is important that a candidate in the 2010 election pledge their commitment to ensuring that Social Security remains a guaranteed life-long benefit.

- With regard to the deficit, New Hampshire AARP members do not support reducing Social Security benefits for future retirees in order to control the deficit. The vast majority (71%) agree more with a hypothetical candidate who says that Social Security is essential for retirement security and that cutting the benefits of future retirees will place an unfair burden on them. One in five (20%) agrees more with a candidate who says that Social Security is one of the biggest federal programs and we can't control the deficit without reducing Social Security benefits for future retirees.
- Furthermore, 66% say that they would be less likely to vote for a candidate who favors reducing the deficit by cutting Social Security benefits for future retirees. Opposition is strong across the state's subgroups and cuts across age, income and party affiliation. Indeed, a majority of Republicans (62%), Democrats (77%) and Independents (62%) would be less likely to vote for a candidate who favors this approach.
- Medicare fraud is perceived to be a major problem that adds substantially to the cost of the program (68%). New Hampshire members' reasoning for cracking down on Medicare fraud is focused more on maintaining the overall strength of the program than on the impact on their own health or finances. The top reason to crack down on Medicare fraud is to keep Medicare financially strong (49%), although a substantial number say the most important reason to fight fraud is that it will save consumers money (14%), protect seniors' health (13%) or help reduce the deficit (10%).
- New Hampshire members are very responsive to a number of bipartisan legislative proposals that have been offered in Congress to fight Medicare fraud. Most (88%) say that "significantly increasing penalties for criminals who commit fraud" would be at least somewhat helpful in helping minimize Medicare fraud and identity theft of Medicare patients, including 55% who say it would help to a great extent. Similarly, 87% say that "changing the way Medicare pays claims so that suspicious claims would have to be verified before they are paid" would help; 50% a great deal. Further, 64% say it would be helpful to "prevent Medicare from using a person's Social Security number as their Medicare number" (32% a great deal). Here again, a majority of AARP members (64%) are more likely to vote for a candidate who supports these proposals while just 5% are less likely.

- New Hampshire members see the threat of annual reduction in reimbursement rates to Medicare doctors as a problem and support a permanent solution. In all, 79% of AARP Medicare beneficiaries say that they are concerned – and 50% are very concerned – that if the 23% cut in payments takes place in December as scheduled, their current doctors will stop accepting Medicare. Future retirees are also concerned; 86% of those not currently enrolled in Medicare say that they are concerned – 54% very – that if Congress fails to fix the doctor reimbursement problem, it will limit their access to doctors when they become Medicare eligible.
- As a result, a majority (59%) would be more likely to vote for a candidate who promises to fix the system to prevent future cuts in reimbursement rates to doctors. Just 6% are less likely.

Political Environment

Mood of the Country: Like other Americans, many New Hampshire AARP members are dissatisfied with the direction of the country – 60% say things are off on the wrong track. Majorities of most major subgroups hold this view while just 32% overall say things are going in the right direction. A more positive perspective is found among Democrats (63% right direction), liberals (64%) and college graduates (41%).

Generally speaking, would you say things in this country are going in the right direction or have they gotten off on the wrong track?

Social Security

Confidence in Social Security: Nearly three-fourths of New Hampshire AARP members say they are confident that they will receive full Social Security benefits throughout their retirement. However, fewer than four in ten respondents (37%) express high confidence. Not surprisingly, younger members are less confident than their older counterparts. Republicans are less confident than Democrats.

Doc Fix

Concern about Medicare reimbursement rates: New Hampshire Medicare enrollees express a high level of concern that their current doctors will stop accepting Medicare if the scheduled 23% cut goes into effect.

As you may know, in an effort to control the rate of growth in Medicare spending, current law requires that doctors who treat Medicare patients receive a reduction in reimbursement rates every year. Although Congress has taken action to block the cuts in the past, it has been unable to come up with a permanent solution to the problem. Currently, doctors are scheduled to receive a 23% cut in reimbursement rates starting December 1.

If the 23 percent payment cut takes effect, how concerned are you that your current doctors will stop accepting Medicare? Are you: (If covered by Medicare, n=231)

Concern about Medicare reimbursement rates: The non-Medicare New Hampshire population is highly concerned that their access to Medicare doctors will be limited in the future if Congress fails to fix the doctor reimbursement problem.

Only 6% are less likely. A majority of Republicans (66%), Ticket-Splitters (57%) and Democrats (59%) are more likely.

Summary and Conclusions

- This survey reveals a political climate born out of the economic crisis and uncertainty of recent years. New Hampshire AARP members are highly dissatisfied with the direction of the country and with the U.S. economy. Fewer than four in 10 are optimistic about the nation's economic prospects over the next year and nearly one in five thinks economic conditions will worsen during that time.
- In addition, members are very concerned about the deficit and about the future. Indeed, more than six in ten (66%) New Hampshire AARP members say they lack confidence that life for their children's generation will be better than it has been for them.
- Even so, most are relatively satisfied with their own economic circumstances and think that their own financial situation will remain stable in the near-term.
- Confidence in Social Security may underpin this view as 74% of all New Hampshire respondents are confident that they will receive full Social Security benefits throughout their retirement.
- Not surprisingly, then, most think Social Security is very important for future generations and would like to see candidates pledge their commitment to ensuring that Social Security remains a guaranteed life-long benefit. Republicans, Democrats and Ticket-Splitters all stress the importance of this commitment.
- In fact, on the important policy questions in this survey, there was surprisingly little difference based on partisan affiliation or voting behavior.

- This common outlook extends to the concept of reducing the Social Security benefits of future retirees in order to control the deficit. This approach is rejected by 71% of New Hampshire AARP members (including 66% of Republicans, 74% of Democrats and 71% of Independents) as an unfair burden to future retirees. Further, 66% say they would be less likely to vote for a candidate who favors this approach to deficit reduction. Once again, a majority of all partisan groups (62% of Republicans, 62% of Independents and 77% of Democrats) hold this view.
- Similarly, there is widespread concern about the continued threat of reductions in Medicare reimbursement rates to doctors. Most think that their ability to receive treatment from a doctor who accepts Medicare will be impacted if the issue is not addressed. As a result, 59% say they would be more likely to vote for a candidate who promises to fix the system to prevent further cuts to reimbursement rates to doctors.
- Medicare fraud is perceived as a major problem and members think the most important reason to crack down on fraud is to keep Medicare strong. To that end, they are receptive to the bipartisan legislative proposals tested and would be more likely to vote for a candidate who supports these efforts to minimize fraud and identity theft of Medicare patients.
