Background

This report examines the concerns, priorities, and interests of AARP Texas members. In addition, the survey explores how aware Texas members are of AARP, what role and activities they would become involved in, and how interested they are in volunteering for AARP. The survey also gauges members' interests in AARP products and services. For the purposes of this analysis the respondents have been broken out into two groups: Non-Hispanic AARP Texas members and Hispanic AARP Texas members (self-identified).

Methodology

AARP conducted the 2006 AARP Texas Member Survey from October 5th through November 2nd, 2006. A random sample of 2,000 AARP members in Texas and an over-sample of 1,000 Hispanic/Latino AARP members in Texas, proportionally stratified by three age segments—50 to 59, 60 to 74, and 75+, was selected from AARP's membership database. Each sampled member was contacted about the survey in four ways: a pre-notification postcard, the survey itself, a reminder postcard, and a second survey. Non-Hispanic and Hispanic Texas members returned 1,153 completed and useable surveys by the cut-off date, providing a 38.6 percent overall response rate. Thus, the survey has a sampling error of plus or minus 2.9 percent.¹

Throughout the report, statistics representing member responses are reported in percentages. In some instances, percentages are small and may not seem to represent a significant proportion of members, yet when projected to the total Texas membership the actual number of people may be substantial. As of the end of January 2007, the number of individual AARP members in Texas was approximately 2.2 million and among them about 250,363 were Hispanic or Latino. A full annotated questionnaire is included for the non-Hispanic and Hispanic AARP Texas members in Appendix A and B.

¹ This means that in 95 out of 100 samples of this size, the results obtained in the sample would fall in the range of 2.3 percentage points of what would have been obtained if every AARP member in Texas age 50 or older had been surveyed.

Highlights

AARP Membership and Volunteer Information

- The majority of non-Hispanic and Hispanic AARP Texas members say the reason they first joined AARP was for its representation of people age 50 and older.
- The majority of non-Hispanic and Hispanic Texas members say they find their AARP membership valuable and they would be likely to renew their membership again.
- About a third of non-Hispanic and Hispanic members say they have volunteered in the last 12 months.
- Hispanic members are more likely to be interested in volunteering for AARP than non-Hispanic members.
- Non-Hispanic members say the opportunity to make a difference on issues that are important to them would be the factor that most motivates them to volunteer for AARP. The factor that most motivates Hispanic members to volunteer is the opportunity to learn about issues that affect people age 50 and over.

Concerns and Priorities

- Non-Hispanic members and Hispanic members have the same top five major concerns: affording the cost of health care, assuring that their pension benefits and retirement savings are safe, staying in their own homes as long as possible as they get older, having Medicare as a base for retirement health insurance, and affording the cost of prescription drugs.
- A majority of non-Hispanic and Hispanic members believe that negotiating lower prices for prescription drugs, working towards comprehensive, affordable, quality healthcare services for all Texans, and ensuring stable and affordable electricity rates should be top or high priorities for AARP.

AARP Roles and Activities

- Hispanic members are more interested in becoming involved in AARP community activities than non-Hispanic members. Hispanic members are most interested in participating in health and wellness sessions.
- Hispanic members are more likely than non-Hispanic members to participate in AARP workshops or meetings. Hispanic members are most interested in attending workshops or meetings on Medicare benefits and options and prescription drug insurance and public benefits.
- Non-Hispanic and Hispanic Texas members prefer to find out about AARP programs, services, or activities via mail.

Member Awareness

- Most members, whether they are non-Hispanic or Hispanic, have not called the AARP Texas State Office. However, 15 percent of non-Hispanic members and 18 percent of Hispanic members say that they have visited the AARP website.
- Hispanic members are more often aware of AARP activities than non-Hispanic members. Hispanic members are most often aware of AARP efforts to provide state specific information on issues or benefits available to older adults.

Products and Services

- Hispanic members are more concerned about products and services than non-Hispanic members. Hispanic members are most concerned about investments and assistance with tax preparation.
- Hispanic members are more interested in discounts on products and services than non-Hispanic members. Hispanic members are most interested in discounts on prescription drugs and health products, eye exams and eyewear, and telephone services.
- Hispanic members are more interested in information and educational products and services than non-Hispanic members. Hispanic members are most interested in information about Social Security, public benefits, welfare, food stamps, and how to save and invest.
- Hispanic members are also more interested in insurance related products than non-Hispanic members. Hispanic members are most interested in health insurance that covers hospitalization and that pays for nursing home or home care.

Detailed Findings

AARP Membership and Volunteer Information

Non-Hispanic and Hispanic Texas members say representation of people age 50+ is the most important reason they first joined AARP.

More than six in ten non-Hispanic and Hispanic members say they joined AARP for its representation of people age 50+. Compared to non-Hispanic members, Hispanic members significantly more often say that information on certain issues or programs and to receive AARP the Magazine are the reasons why they first joined AARP.

Reasons Why Members First Joined AARP

* Significant difference for error probability $p < 0.05$

More than eight in ten non-Hispanic Texas members and more than nine in ten Hispanic members rate the overall value of their membership in AARP as very or somewhat valuable. Ten percent of non-Hispanic members, however, say the overall membership is not very valuable to them, which represents a considerable number that deserves further attention. When projected to the total non-Hispanic Texas members this represents approximately 200,597.

The likelihood of renewal among non-Hispanic and Hispanic members is very high. More than nine in ten non-Hispanic and Hispanic members say it is very or somewhat likely that they will renew their membership when it is time to renew.

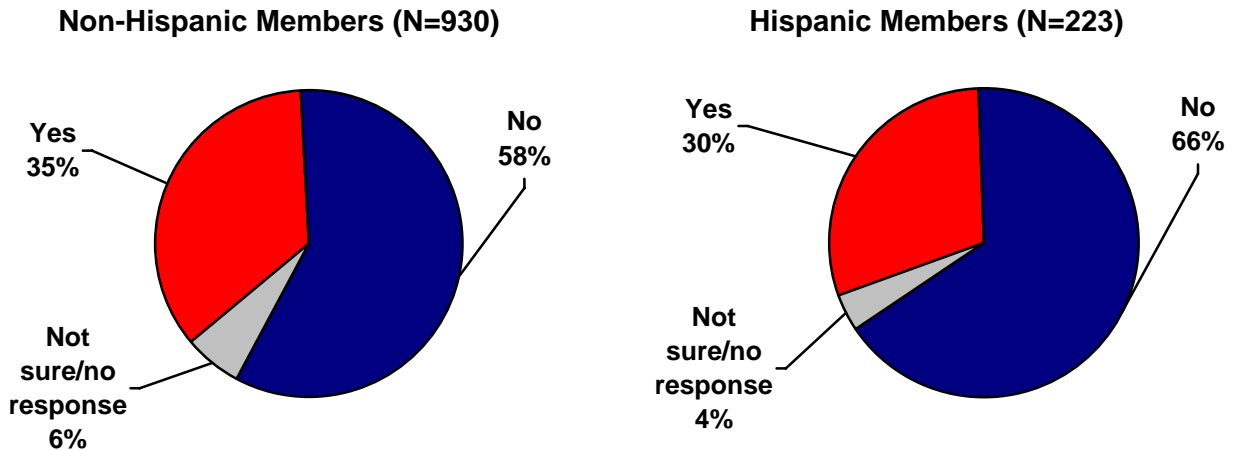

Volunteering

About a third of non-Hispanic and Hispanic Texas members are engaged in volunteer work.

In the past twelve months more than a third of non-Hispanic members and three in ten Hispanic members have volunteered their free time to local or national organizations or groups.

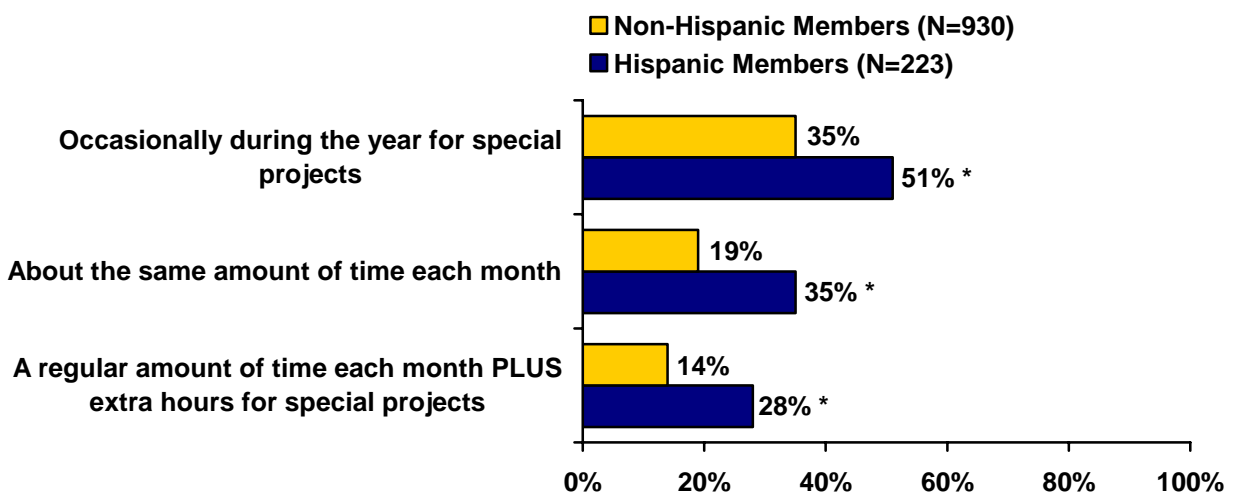

Volunteering During the Past 12 Months

Hispanic members are more interested in volunteering for AARP compared to non-Hispanic Texas members.

More than half of Hispanic members would be extremely, very, or somewhat interested in volunteering for AARP for special projects compared to only about a third of non-Hispanic members. Compared to non-Hispanic members, Hispanic members would more often spend the same amount of time each month or they would spend a regular amount plus extra hours for volunteering. Caution must be used in interpreting this data as a plurality of both non-Hispanic and Hispanic members are only somewhat interested in volunteering for AARP.²

² See Question 26 in the annotations, Appendix A and B.

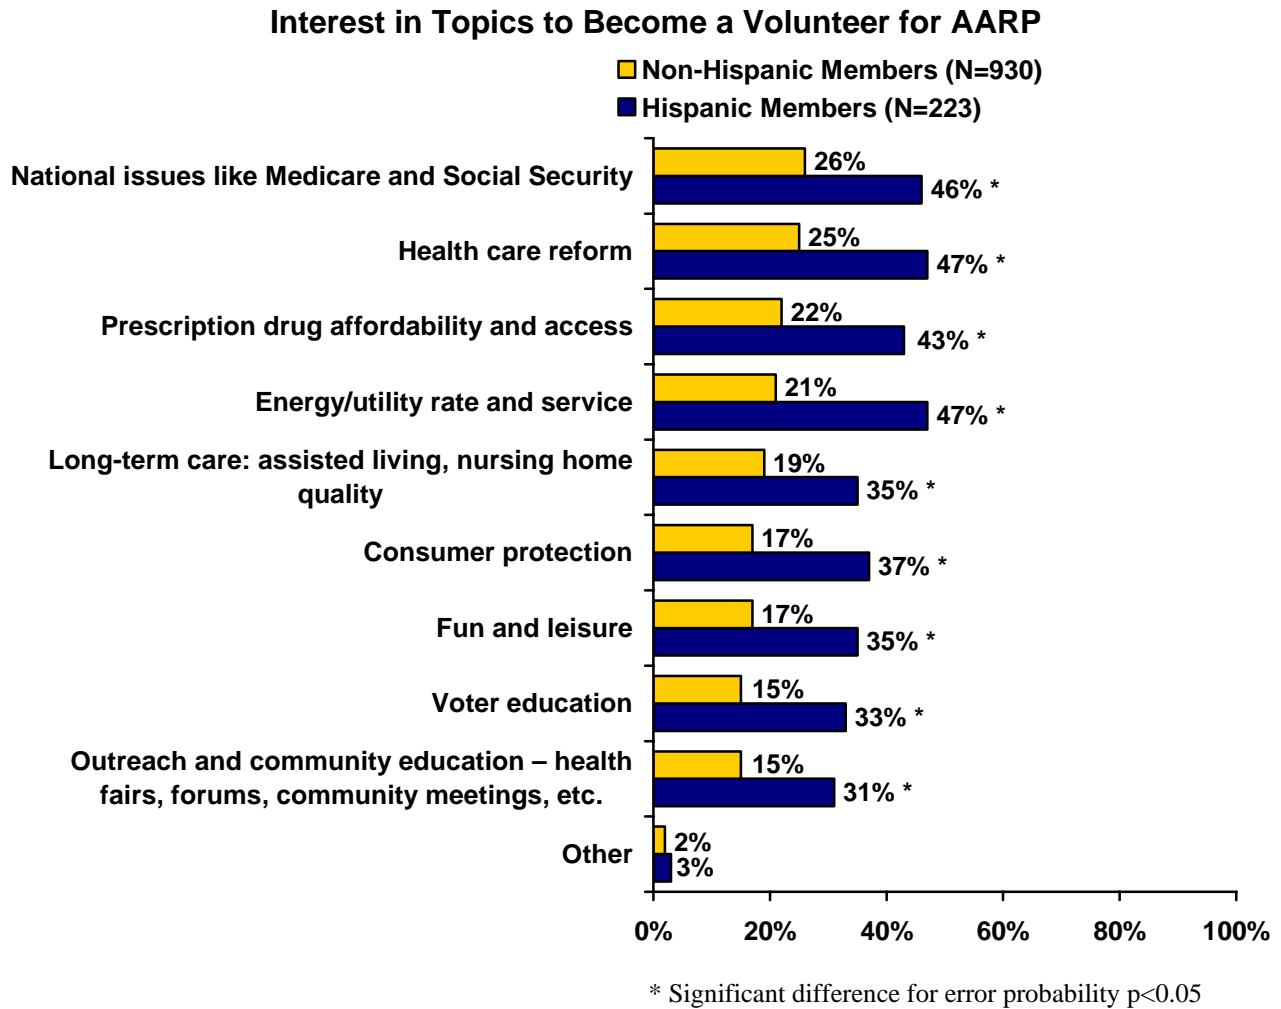

The opportunity to make a difference, to help other people, and to learn about issues that affect people 50 and older are major reasons for non-Hispanic and Hispanic Texas members to volunteer for AARP.

Nearly four in ten non-Hispanic members and about half of Hispanic members would be motivated to volunteer for AARP if they see an opportunity to make a difference on issues that are important to them, to help other people in the community, and to learn about issues that affect people 50 and older. All of the factors would be more likely to motivate Hispanic members to volunteer compared to non-Hispanic members with the exception of the opportunity to affect public policy.

Hispanic members express more interest in topics to become a volunteer for AARP compared to non-Hispanic Texas members.

Almost half of Hispanic members say that topics such as Medicare and Social Security, health care reform, and energy/utility rate and service interest them enough to become a volunteer for AARP. In comparison, significantly fewer non-Hispanic members say the same.

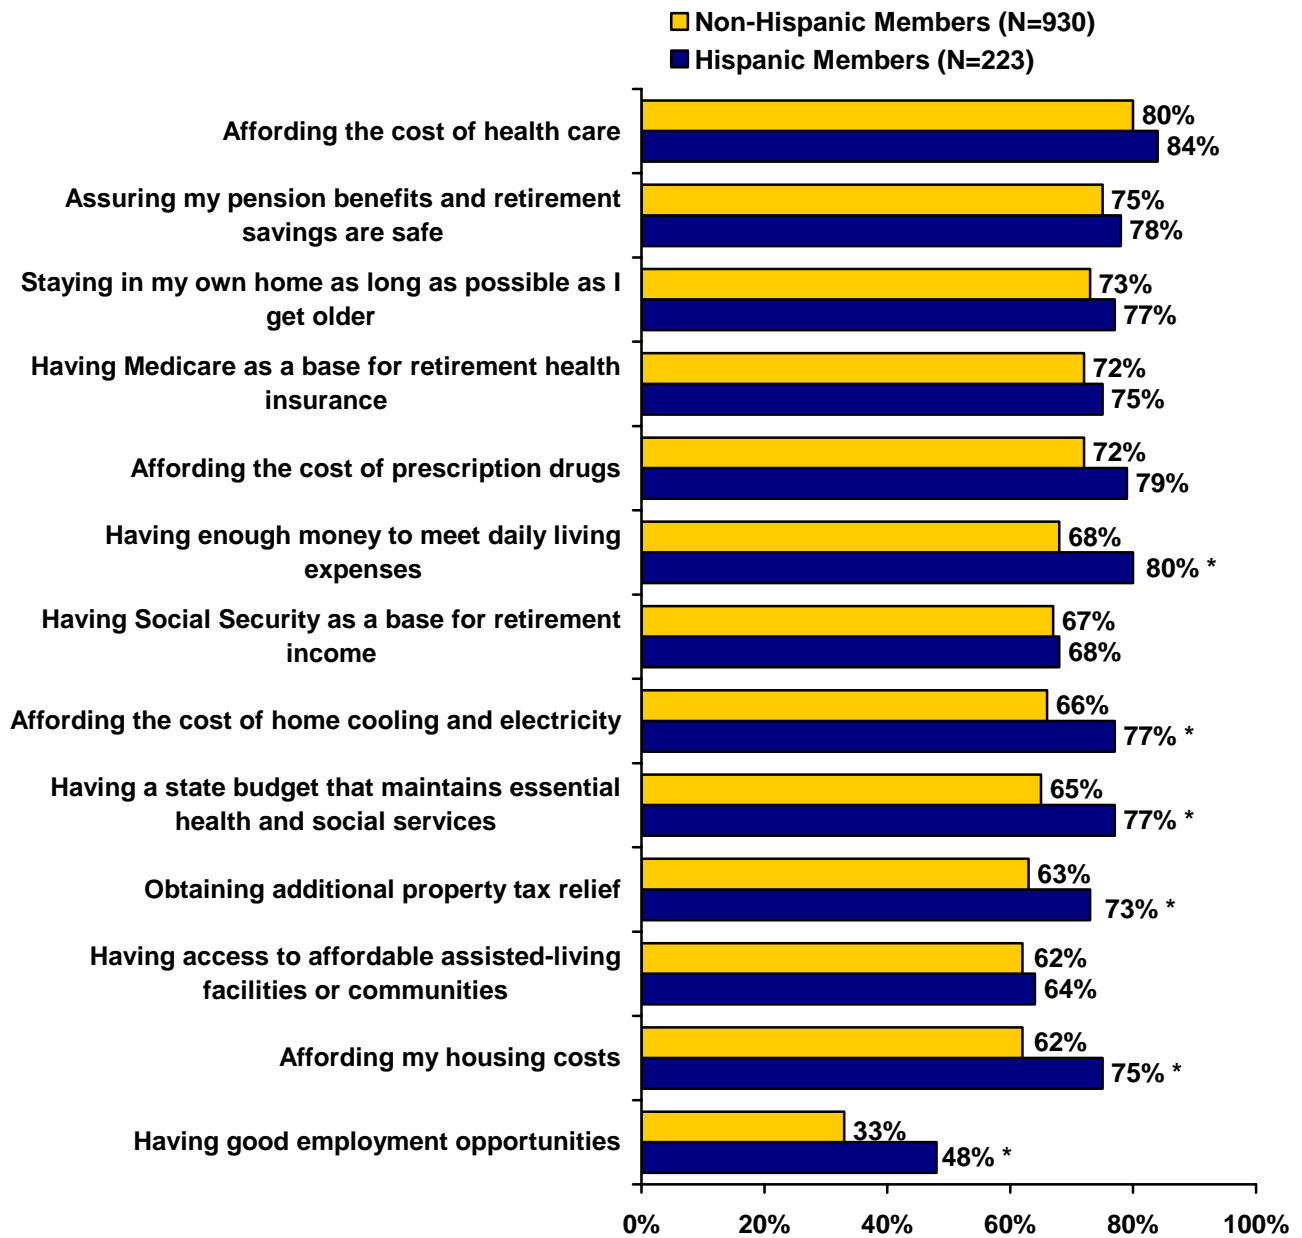

Concerns and Priorities

The top concerns for non-Hispanic and Hispanic Texas members are health care, financial security, and the desire to stay in their own home as long as possible.

Non-Hispanic and Hispanic members do not differ in their top five major concerns. More than seven in ten members in both groups are extremely or very concerned about affording the cost of health care, assuring that pension benefits and retirement savings are safe, staying in their own home as long as possible, having Medicare as a base for retirement health insurance, and being able to afford the cost of prescription drugs. Four in ten or more of both non-Hispanic and Hispanic members are extremely concerned about these five issues. Hispanic members are more concerned about having enough money to meet their daily expenses, affording the cost of home cooling and electricity, having a state budget that maintains essential health and social services, obtaining additional property tax relief, affording housing costs, and having good employment opportunities compared to non-Hispanic members. With the exception of having good employment opportunities about a third or more of Hispanic members are extremely concerned with these issues.³

Non-Hispanic and Hispanic Texas members say that health care related issues should be a top or high priority for AARP Texas.

At least eight in ten non-Hispanic and Hispanic members believe that negotiating lower prices for prescription drugs, working towards comprehensive, affordable, quality healthcare services for all Texans, and ensuring stable and affordable electricity rates should be top or high priorities for AARP. Hispanic members are more likely to say that negotiating for lower drug prices, providing Medicaid beneficiaries with access to needed services, and implementing state standards requiring home contractors to be licensed and insured should be top or high priorities compared to non-Hispanic members.⁴

Hispanic members are more interested in becoming involved in AARP activities in the community compared to non-Hispanic Texas members.

More than six in ten Hispanic members would like to be involved in health and wellness sessions, annual community projects, monthly meetings that educate and inform, and training sessions on specific issues compared to less than half of non-Hispanic members. Hispanic members are also much more interested in social fun or leisure activities and volunteer training sessions than non-Hispanic members. Caution should be used interpreting these results as most non-Hispanic and Hispanic members are very or somewhat interested in these opportunities.⁵

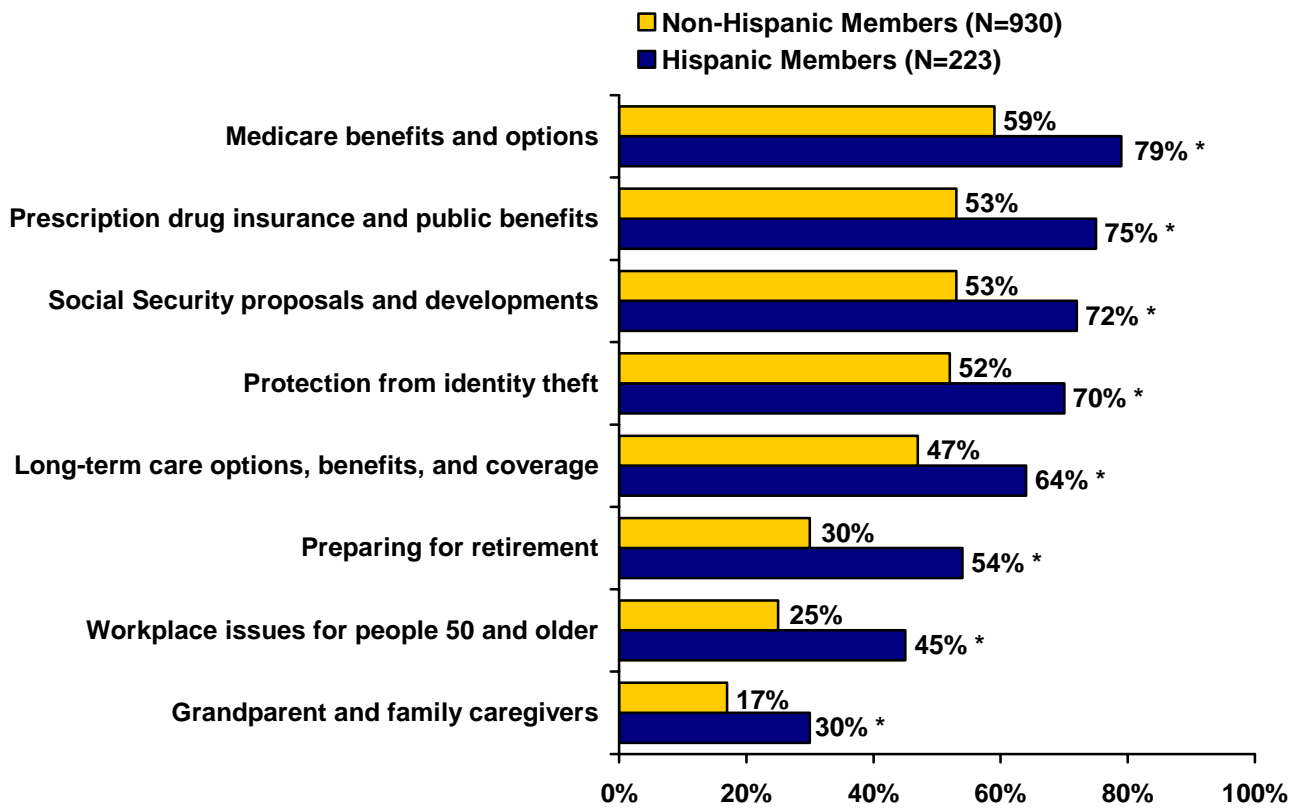

Responses for extremely, very and somewhat involved were combined
 * Significant difference for error probability $p < 0.05$

⁵ See Question 3 in the annotations, Appendix A and B.

Hispanic members are more likely to attend AARP workshops or meetings than non-Hispanic Texas members. The majority of both groups would attend workshops or meetings on Medicare benefits, prescription drugs, Social Security, and identity theft.

Seven in ten or more of Hispanic members say they would attend workshops or meetings on Medicare benefits, prescription drug insurance, Social Security, and protection from identity theft compared to just over half of non-Hispanic members. Hispanic members are also more likely to say they would attend workshops or meetings on long-term care options, preparing for retirement, workplace issues, and grandparent and family caregivers.

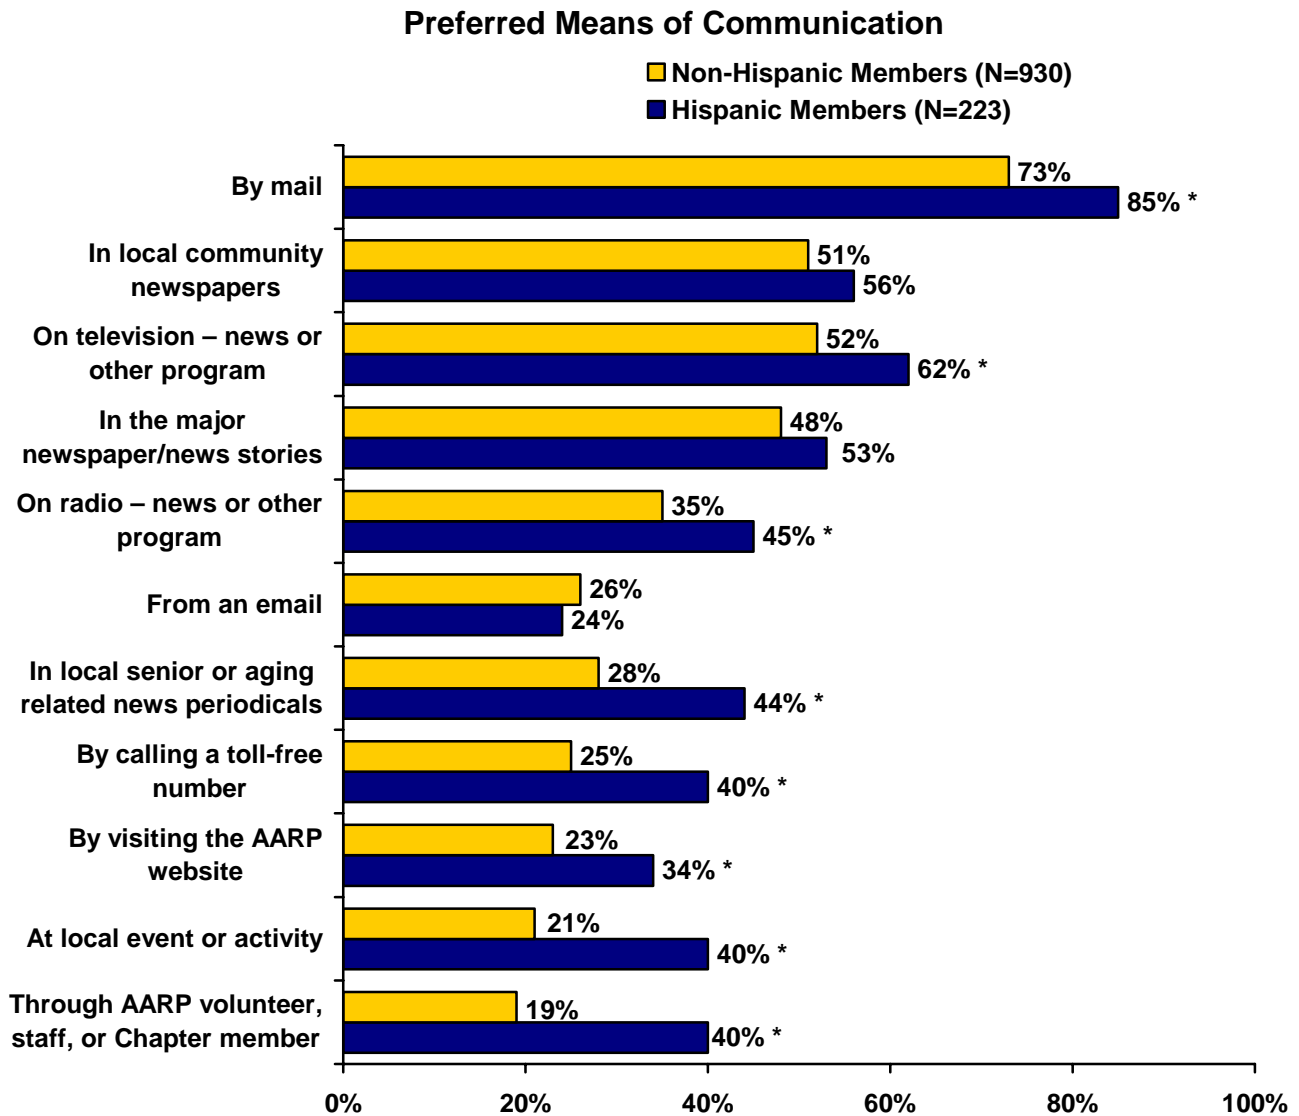

Potential for Attending AARP Workshops or Meetings

* Significant difference for error probability $p < 0.05$

Most non-Hispanic and Hispanic Texas members prefer to find out about AARP programs, services, or activities by mail.

The most preferred methods of communication for non-Hispanic and Hispanic members are mail, local newspapers, television, and major newspapers. Although mail is the preferred method of communication for both groups, Hispanic members are more likely to prefer this method. Hispanic members are also more likely to prefer receiving information via television, radio, aging periodicals, a toll-free number, the AARP website, local events, or through an AARP volunteer, staff, or Chapter member.

* Significant difference for error probability $p < 0.05$

Few non-Hispanic and Hispanic members have attended AARP Texas events in the past year.

Attended AARP Texas Events

However, if AARP Texas were to hold an event in the community, half of Hispanic members (50%) and more than a quarter of non-Hispanic members (27%) say they would attend the event.⁶ Hispanic members find weekdays after 5pm (34%) and before 5pm (27%) most convenient.⁷ Non-Hispanic members similarly, though in reverse order, say weekdays before 5pm (34%) and after 5pm (25%) would be most convenient to them. Weekends after 5pm are the least convenient as only five percent of non-Hispanic members and seven percent of Hispanic members mention that time frame. Given that similar percentages of non-Hispanic and Hispanic members want to attend events before and after 5pm, it may be difficult for the AARP Texas State Office to organize events at a convenient time for those willing to attend.

⁶ See Question 8 in the annotations, Appendix A and B.

⁷ See Question 9 in the annotations, Appendix A and B.

Member Awareness

Most non-Hispanic and Hispanic members have not called the AARP Texas State Office, five percent of non-Hispanic members and nine percent of Hispanic members have called. Of those who have contacted the Texas State Office by phone, nine in ten Hispanic members and three in four non-Hispanic members say they are extremely and very satisfied with the phone contact.⁸

In comparison, website visits are more frequent. Though the majority of non-Hispanic and Hispanic members in Texas have not visited the state website, a sizeable minority of non-Hispanic (15%) and Hispanic members (18%) have logged on to www.aarp.org/tx.

Visited the AARP Texas Website (www.aarp.org/tx)

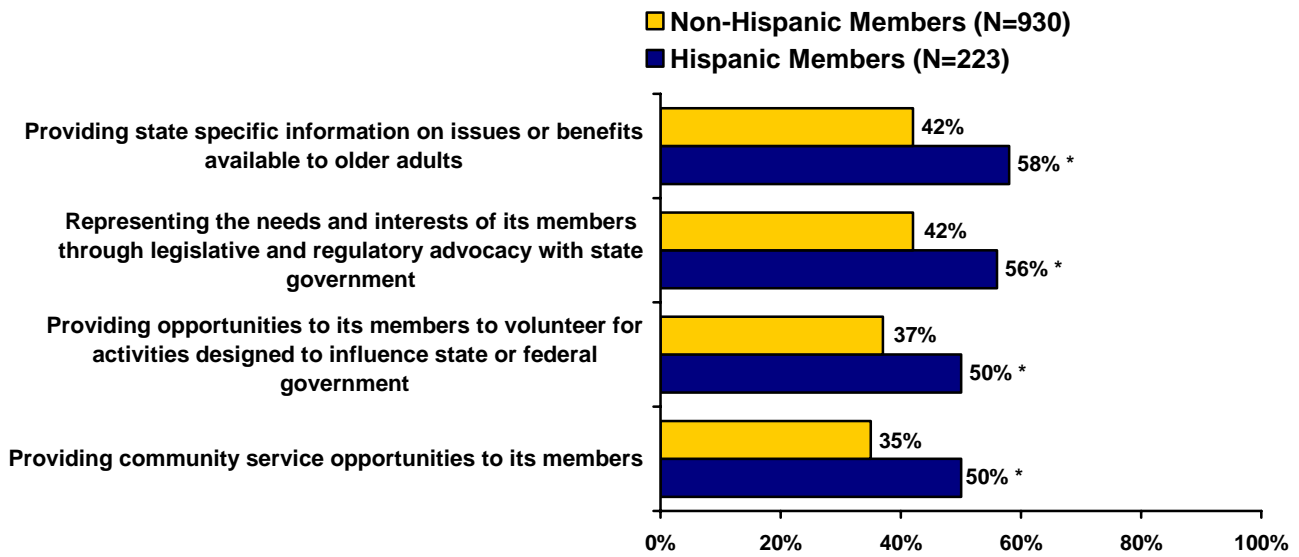

⁸ See question 11 in the annotations, Appendix A and B.

Hispanic members are more often aware of AARP activities compared to non-Hispanic Texas members.

Almost six in ten Hispanic members say AARP was extremely, very, or somewhat active in providing state specific information on issues or benefits available to older adults and in representing the needs and interests of its members through legislative and regulatory advocacy with state government. Though non-Hispanic members less often share this view, more than four in ten say that AARP was extremely, very, or somewhat active in providing state specific information to older adults and in representing member interests. Most Hispanic and non-Hispanic members believe AARP has been very or somewhat active in each of these areas.⁹

⁹ See Question 13 in the annotations, Appendix A and B.

More than one in four Hispanic members (28%) and almost one in four non-Hispanic Texas members (23%) have read or heard about AARP working with the Texas State government in the past year. The issues these members most often have heard of in the past year are consumer fraud protection, utility or electric rate increases, and long-term care services. Non-Hispanic members were more likely than Hispanic members to have heard about utility or electric rate increases.

Thinking about all they have seen, heard, or read about AARP in Texas in the past year, more than six in ten Hispanic members say it has been very (29%) or somewhat positive (33%). In comparison, non-Hispanic members are significantly more reserved, more than half of them say it has been very (20%) or somewhat positive (31%).¹⁰

Hispanic members are more concerned about products and services compared to non-Hispanic Texas members.

Almost six in ten Hispanic members say they are extremely, very, or somewhat concerned about investments such as mutual funds and assistance with tax preparation. At least four in ten Hispanic members are concerned about assistance with credit management and getting loans. Most Hispanic members are very or somewhat concerned with any of these products and services.¹¹ Fewer non-Hispanic members are concerned about any of these products and services.

Hispanic members are more interested in discounts on products and services compared to non-Hispanic Texas members.

Non-Hispanic and Hispanic members are most interested in discounts on prescription drugs and health products, and eye exams and eyewear with half or more being extremely interested.¹² However, about nine in ten Hispanic members are interested in these services compared to about three in four non-Hispanic members. The majority of both groups are also interested in discounts on telephone services and airline travel within the U.S. In general, Hispanic members are more interested in all of these discounts on products and services than non-Hispanic members.

Responses for extremely, very, and somewhat interested were combined
 * Significant difference for error probability $p < 0.05$

¹² See Question 18 in the annotations, Appendix A and B.

Hispanic members are more interested in informational and educational products and services compared to non-Hispanic Texas members.

The majority of non-Hispanic and Hispanic members say they are extremely, very, or somewhat interested in information about Social Security/public benefits/welfare/food stamps, how to save and invest, driver safety, and Internet websites with relevant information. Hispanic members are more interested in all of these informational and educational products and services than non-Hispanic members.¹³

Responses for extremely, very, and somewhat interested were combined

¹³ See Question 19 in the annotations, Appendix A and B.

Hispanic members are more interested in many insurance-related products and services compared to non-Hispanic Texas members.

The majority of non-Hispanic and Hispanic members are interested in all of the insurance products and services asked about in the survey. Both groups are most interested in health insurance that covers hospitalization and insurance that pays for nursing home or home care if they are unable to care for themselves with three in ten or more being extremely interested. Nearly nine in ten Hispanic members are interested in these products compared to three in four non-Hispanic members. Hispanic members express significantly more interest in all of these insurance-related products compared to non-Hispanic members.¹⁴

Conclusions

The majority of non-Hispanic and Hispanic Texas members say they first joined AARP for its representation of people age 50 and older. Over eight in ten of non-Hispanic and Hispanic members view their AARP membership as valuable. Nearly all members from both groups say they will be likely to renew their membership.

The reason non-Hispanic and Hispanic Texas members joined AARP is reflected in concerns and priorities. Both non-Hispanic and Hispanic Texas members have the same major concerns: affording the cost of health care, keeping their pension benefits and savings safe, staying in their own homes as they age, having Medicare as their retirement health insurance, and affording the cost of prescription drugs. However, Hispanic members are more concerned about financial issues such as affording their daily living expenses, housing costs, utilities, obtaining property tax relief, and having good employment opportunities. Closely related to their concerns, both groups believe that negotiating for lower prescription drug prices, having comprehensive, affordable, quality healthcare, and having stable and affordable electricity rates should be top priorities for AARP Texas. Hispanic members are not only more concerned about the negotiation of drug prices but also about providing Medicaid beneficiaries with proper access to medical services and placing licensing and insurance requirements on home contractors.

Hispanic members are much more likely to want to become involved with AARP on a community level than non-Hispanic members. Hispanic members are most interested in sessions on health and wellness, meetings that educate and inform them, annual community projects, and training on issues. Hispanic members are also much more likely to participate in AARP workshops or meetings, particularly on Medicare and prescription drug issues. Although about a third of non-Hispanic and Hispanic Texas members say they have volunteered over the past year, Hispanic members are more interested in volunteering for AARP than non-Hispanic members. The opportunity to learn about issues that affect people age 50 and over is what would most motivate Hispanic members to become involved with AARP. In comparison, the opportunity to make a difference on issues that are important to them is what would most motivate Texas non-Hispanic members to volunteer.

Most members, whether they are non-Hispanic or Hispanic, have not called the Texas State Office. However, about 15 percent of non-Hispanic and 18 percent of Hispanic members have visited the AARP website. Hispanic members tend to be more aware of any AARP activities than non-Hispanic members. Hispanic members are most aware of AARP's state specific information on issues and benefits that are available to older adults and advocacy activities. More than six in ten Hispanic members and about five in ten non-Hispanic members say that what they have seen, heard, or read about AARP has been positive.

Hispanic members are more interested in discounts on and information about products and services than non-Hispanic members. Hispanic members are most interested in discounts on prescription drugs and health products, eye exams and eyewear, and telephone services. Hispanic members are also most interested in information about Social Security, public benefits, welfare, food stamps, and how to save and invest. Additionally, Hispanic members are more interested in insurance related products such as health insurance that covers hospitalization and that pays for nursing home or home care.

This report is a useful tool for AARP Texas to engage and involve members in their state in AARP activities and advocacy efforts. Moreover, this information can help AARP Texas to target their outreach efforts to specific communities. Both non-Hispanic and Hispanic AARP Texas members most prefer to find out about AARP programs, services, or activities via mail, local community newspapers, or television programs.
