South Dakota Members: Agree to Accessible, Adequate, and Affordable Health Care Coverage for All

AARP South Dakota, in response to the needs of its membership, commissioned a survey to explore the views of AARP members ages 50 to 64. Access to health care, cost of services, insurance coverage, and financial responsibility for health care are all concerns of AARP members in South Dakota. While fewer than 10 percent of AARP members ages 50-64 in South Dakota are uninsured, less than the 16 percent uninsured rate for adults in the state,1 members remain concerned about the affordability of health care in the future and believe that all South Dakotans deserve adequate and accessible health care. Additionally, respondents in this survey strongly believe that funding for health care services is a joint responsibility, between individuals, employees, employers and the government.

- Access to health care services and providers is a concern for AARP members in South Dakota. According to the survey, two in three AARP South Dakota members ages 50-64 are extremely or very concerned about having access to health care services and providers that they need.

- Cost of health care services is a concern for AARP members ages 50-64 in South Dakota. Approximately seven in ten members are extremely or very concerned about being able to afford services in the next five years.

- Access to affordable and adequate health care coverage is for all South Dakotans according to AARP members ages 50-64. Nine in ten members strongly or somewhat agree that all South Dakotans should have affordable and adequate access.

- Everyone, including employers, employees, individuals, and the government, should contribute to a system to provide access to affordable and adequate health care coverage for South Dakotans. Eight in ten strongly or somewhat agree that everyone has to contribute to provide access to affordable and adequate health care coverage.

AARP strongly recommends that South Dakota policymakers and candidates for state office carefully consider the findings in this study of 1,092 AARP members ages 50-64 in South Dakota. Strong majorities of AARP members ages 50-64, many of whom vote in all or most state elections, are concerned about access to and cost of health care services and providers. They have health care needs too: nearly half have a chronic medical condition such as diabetes, high blood pressure, and osteoporosis. As stated above, some are not even covered with any kind of insurance or government plan: Almost one in ten AARP members ages 50-64 in South Dakota are uninsured. AARP South Dakota members ages 50-64 recommend a system where all South Dakotans have access to affordable and adequate health coverage and all are responsible for contributing.

Methodology

AARP conducted the 2007 AARP South Dakota Survey: Health Care between September 19 and October 30, 2007. Mail surveys were sent to a randomly selected sample of 2,000 members between the ages of 50 and 64.

Each sampled member was contacted about the survey in four ways: a pre-notification postcard, the survey itself, a reminder postcard, and a second survey. Of those surveyed, 1,092 returned completed questionnaires by the survey end date, yielding a response rate of 55 percent. The survey has a sampling error of plus or minus three percent.

Survey responses were weighted to reflect the distribution of those AARP members between the ages of 50 and 64. As of December 31, 2007, there are 102,921 active AARP members residing in the state of South Dakota. Throughout the report, statistics representing member responses are reported in percentages. Percentages may not sum to 100 due to rounding effects.
Two in three AARP members ages 50-64 in South Dakota are extremely or very concerned about having access to the health care services and providers that they need.
Concern about Affordability

Seven in ten AARP members ages 50-64 in South Dakota are extremely or very concerned about being able to afford health care services in the next five years.

The chart illustrates the distribution of concern levels among respondents.
All Have Access and All Contribute

Well over 90 percent agree that all South Dakotans should have access to health care coverage. Eighty-two percent of AARP members ages 50-64 in South Dakota strongly agree while another 12 percent somewhat agree that all South Dakotans should have access to affordable and adequate health care coverage.

All South Dakotans Should Have Access to Affordable and Adequate Health Care Coverage
(N = 1,092)

- Strongly/somewhat agree: 94%
- Neither agree nor disagree: 2%
- Somewhat/strongly disagree: 2%
- Not sure/no answer: 2%
Eight in ten agree that everyone should contribute to a system to provide access to affordable and adequate health care coverage for all South Dakotans. Some 57 percent strongly agree while 23 percent somewhat agree that everyone including employers, employees, individuals, and the government should contribute to a system.

AARP South Dakota Members: Health Care Coverage Profile

It is important to note that eight percent of AARP South Dakota members ages 50-64 surveyed do not have any kind of health care coverage, including health insurance or government plans such as Medicare or Medicaid.

Among the 90 percent with health care coverage, nearly three in four have employer or retirement-based coverage.
