

Long-Term Care in Delaware

The number of Delaware residents age 85 and older is projected to nearly double by 2030.

Delaware's older population can be at greater risk for chronic illnesses and in need of long-term care. Fourteen percent of Delaware's population is age 65+ with nearly 16,200 residents age 85+.¹ Delaware's age 85+ population – the age group that is most likely to need long-term care services – will grow 89% from 2007 to 2030.² This ranks Delaware in the top twenty states (#18) in the nation in the projected growth rate of the 85+ population.

Most prefer to receive long-term care at home; however, Delaware spends 90 percent of the state's Medicaid funds on institutional care.

The majority of Americans age 50+ (89%) want to stay in their homes for as long as they can.³ Nearly 184,000 Delawareans rely on Medicaid, and eight percent are age 65+.⁴ Home and community-based service (HCBS) waivers allow Medicaid recipients to receive Medicaid funding for in-home care. In Delaware, Medicaid allows some to choose in-home care instead of nursing home care. In 2006, 217 people 65+ and 1,117 people 65+ with disabilities received a waiver.⁵ In 2008, no one in these groups waited to receive a waiver.⁶ On average, the Medicaid program can provide HCBS to three people for the cost of serving one person in a nursing home.⁷

Delaware spends 10% of its Medicaid long-term care dollars for older people and adults with physical disabilities on home and community-based care – ranking it near the bottom (43rd) in spending on home care services for this population.⁸

In addition, 105,000 Delawareans are providing family caregiving to a loved one at home. This care is valued at nearly $1.3 billion.⁹

Delaware had the 18th highest average nursing home private pay rate in 2008 at $210 per day.

In 2007, Delaware's nursing homes had an occupancy rate of 85%.¹⁰ This care is expensive. In 2008, the average nursing home private pay rate was $210.¹¹ Delaware also had higher rates for Medicare-certified home health aides ($43/hr) and adult day care ($67/day). Delaware's rate for private pay home health aides ($20/hr) was close to the national average.¹²

Fourteen of Delaware's 46 nursing homes rated above average in health inspections.

The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) created a five-star quality rating to help consumers compare nursing homes. CMS rates nursing homes on health inspections, staffing, and quality measures.

The health inspection process is comprehensive and conducted by a trained team of objective surveyors.¹³

Recent studies have found that non-profit nursing homes generally deliver higher quality of care.¹⁴ In 2007, 50% of Delaware's nursing homes were for profit (39%, non-profit; 11%, government-owned).¹⁵

Few Americans have long-term care insurance.

Nationally, about 7 million long-term care insurance policies were in effect in 2005, and the typical purchaser was age 61 with assets over $100,000.¹⁶ Cost is a major factor in the decision to purchase long-term care insurance. In 2008, premiums for a married couple in their sixties were about $3,000 a year.¹⁷ Delaware has not adopted the most recent long-term care insurance recommendations from the National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC).¹⁸
